Suddenly out of nothing, as it were, there materializes against the deep, intense blue of the sky a soft, round white cloud, while a few seconds later comes the dull detonation that somehow does not seem associated in the least with the white cloudlet, which drifts lazily away, and is dispersed in the blue ether. "The rebel batteries!" somebody exclaimed, as one white cloud was followed by another, and still another, until three or four had floated away, when the enemy recognizing the futility of wasting ammunition, ceased firing.

"If they realized the value of this cargo they would bombard us," someone remarked, while the captain explained that we were beyond their range, and it was not likely the chief executive of the nation would take such foolish risks. Miss Gertrade Burd,

The ladies of the Women's Christian Temperance Union wish to return thanks to the forists of the city and to all other friends for their generous donations of flowers on Thursday, June 9. About 500 bouquets were distributed in hospitals, charitable institutions and to the sick in some houses. A large number of magazines and other periodicals were taken to the hospitals. The ladies feel assured that if the good people in the homes of this city know how pleased these "shut-in" ones are to be thus remembered, they would not throw good literature into waste baskets, but would see that it found its way to the W.C. T. U. headquarters in the Rilato building.

rans were also taken to the hospitals. Fans were also taken to the hospitals, one dozen hats were given to girls in the Crittenden home, and to each person receiving flowers was given a card with a Scripture text on one side, on the other the words "A Message for You." and in one corner a dainty bow of white ribbon.

June 9 is observed as Flower Mission day throughout the world by the W. C. T. U., thus carrying sunshine to thousands of darkened lives.

FOR THE SUMMER HOME.

What Will Be Appropriate for Cottages at the Seashore or in the Mountains.

Extreme simplicity combined with a gen-eral air of comfort should characterize the cottage sitting room, where it is advisable to have everything of the useful rather than of the ornamental order. But that, of course, does not mean that the room cannot be tasteful and pretty, only that valuable space must not be monopolized by pleces of unnecessary furniture which do not serve some practical purpose. tot serve some practical purpose. Cane easy chairs fitted with loose cushions nicely covered in cretonne, such as the Madeira chairs, which make comfortable seats and occupy such a small amount of space, a small Chesterfield lounge upholstered in cretonne, or some equally comfortable couch, with a small folding teatable are all very suitable items of furniture. A writing table is also very essential, and table are all very suitable items of furniture.

A writing table is also very essential, and we cannot do better than have a bureau made of strong bamboo.

And in order that it may not look quite odd, it will be well to have a dwarf book-case of the same, which can fill any recess there may be in the room, and will be found a valuable addition, as in it may be stowed away not only books, but the magazines and newspapers that are apt to collect with such alarming rapidity and look so untidy if left about.

If there is a space in the window for a seat, it is a very simple matter to have a small fixture made and furnish it with a comfortable loose cushion, and the window itself must not be overdone with curtains; all that it requires is a pair of cream spotted muslin curtains to hang down to the window ledge. It is wise to have all the window ledge. It is wise to have all the window curtains of this spotted muslim, with cream Holland bilinds in the dining and sitting rooms and dark green ones for the bedrooms.

It frequently happens that the fireplaces in these small houses are by no means things of beauty, and it is quite worth while going to a little expense and having a new one in the sitting room, otherwise it is bound to be a continual eyesore. A small Mariborough grate, surrounded by some pretty tiles, will work a wonderful transformation, and the cost need not exceed $25 or $30, while the extra comfort when a fire is required, as it is sure to be on many chilly evenings, will be sufficient compensation for the outlay.

It is a little difficult to decide upon a floor covering for this room unless we have a square of carpet, with a margin of linoleum, as the useful and durable coverings do not give the same idea of comfort. A Caledon carpet will be the most durable of inexpensive carpets, as it is closely woven, and with an underlayer of felt it will be sufficiently substantial, while it is so light that there will be no trouble in taking it up for shaking every few weeks, as will be found necessary when the wardrobe consists of dresses in plain white nainsook. These have skirts finished with a hemstitched fold, and frequently narrow tucks or insertion. Ginghams of bright colors, with featherstitched ruffles on the shoulders, are most serviceable and easily made.

For afternoon the well dressed child will wear a plque dress with as much handwrought embroidery as is consistent with good taste. On account of the thickness of this material a guimpe is always used, the yoke of which is made of embroidery or tucks of insertion, with narrow little puffs.

or tucks of insertion, with narrow little puffs.

Sleeves are always full puffs, shirred at the wrists, with narrow bands and ruffles, and as a tule are long.

Costumes of this kind are easily made at home, as are those of white China silk, which are elaborately trimmed with lace and worn only on special occasions. Grass cioth has found its way into the ward-robe of small children, and dresses of this material are made perfectly plain, worn with white guimps.

Natural Shoe Polish.

Orange juice is one of the best dressings for black shoes or boots. Take a slice or quarter of an orange and rub it on the shoe or boot. Then, when dry, brush with a soft brush until the shoe shines like a looking glass. This is an English recipe. Another fruit dressing is for tan shoes, the inside of a banana skin. Rub the skin over the shoes thoroughly, wipe off carefully with a soft cloth briskly. Patent leather shoes should not be polished with blacking. These are the hardest kind of shoes to keep looking well and require constant care. They may be cleaned with a damp sponge and immediately dried with a soft cloth, with occasionally a little vaseline or sweet oil. They must never be donned in cold weather without heating, or they will crack as soon as exposed to the cold air.

Strawberry Float.

Place a saucepan with one pint of milk, one teaspoonful cornstarch or flour, two tablespoonfuls sugar, the yolk of three eggs and a sprinkle of salt over the fire; stir until just about to boil or the custard coats the spoon; remove; add one teaspoonful vanilla and set it on ice. When the custard is ice cold, and about ten minutes before serving, put one pint well cleaned strawberries in a glass dish, sprinkle over two tablespoonfuls granulated sugar; let them stand ten minutes. In the meantime beat the three whites till stiff; add half tablespoonful sugar; pour the cold custard over the berries; lay the beaten whites of egg by spoonfuls on top, break four lady fingers in halves and set them around the edge of dish, and serve.

Monkeys Have the Mensles.

Monkeys Have the Mensics.

From the Pall Mall Garette.

Why on earth should anyone wish to give a monkey measles? Presumably Dr. Albert Josias knows, for he has been trying that experiment. Measles, it appears, have been hitherto a special distinction of the human race, and, though everybody has heard of a measley pig, that is not the right kind of measles. Pigs decline to get human measles, or at least they do so in France. Dr. Josias tried them with contagion, and he tried them with inoculation, and not a measle was to be seen. Then he tried monkeys—two kinds; the macaques were obdurate, but the sajoux (whose English name escapes us) took the infection just like any spotty child. Man has no longer a prerogative to our poor relation.

Beef Tongue.

Boil a fresh beef tongue in the stock pot with salt and soup vegetables until tender, which will be about one hour and a half; skin and put on a dish, garnishing with a pint of hot Milanaise rice, made as follows: Chop fine a good sized onion, and fry in butter until a golden color; then add a cupful of rice and a half dozen minced mushrooms; stir for two minutes and add one quart of boiling broth; stir lightly once; cook fifteen minutes, and add more broth at intervals, as needed. About ten minutes more will finish the cooking, when season with one teaspoonful of pepper; add half a cup of grated Swiss cheese.

WOMEN ARE GOOD SPIES

ARE ENTHUSIASTIC, FEARLESS AND SHAMELESS TO THE EXD.

Work in the Name of Love-Rarely Can Be Depended Upon to Betray a Real Lover, However-

-Weyler's Plaint

from the Chicago Times-Herald.

There is one branch of military duty for which women show especial aptitude—that of secret service. They make excellent sples. More patient and persevering than men, they are exceeding skillful at surpris-ing secrets, and since the days Delilah many Samsons have been shorn of their strength through the wiles of deceitful women. Still, it is scarcely fair to class all ecret service agents as spies. The exigensecret service agents as spies. The exigencies of military service require that generals should be furnished with information as to the enemy, and the man or woman who risks life in order to serve his country and cause is quite on another plane from the Judas who sells his own people for the enemy's gold. Nina Diaz betrayling her mother to a convict prison, with the possible fate of La Centa in reserve, is an object of execration; Belle Boyd fording the Potomac in a heavy storm of wind and rain at midnight to carry the news of a premeditated attack to her brother in Stuart's cavalry stirs hearts with admiration for her unselfish courage.

Spies in Rebellion.

Spies in Rebellion.

Secret service was carried to the utmost perfection during the war of the rebellion, and the government of the United States spent over $2,000,000 for that purpose. Yet there were few traitors on either side. Many of the sples were women, and it is often said that sex gave them no pro-there were few traitors on either side. Many of the sples were women, and it is often said that sex gave them no protection.

Recently the government at Washington has received information to the effect that several Spanish spies, women in the pay of Bianco, are in New York and Washington, but the information has not been precise enough to do more than put the secret service force on guard. Nina Diaz is reported to be among the number of these women, who are reported to be mostly Cubans.

The Spanish prefer them to the Spanish women as spies. The story goes that Weyler, disgusted at the fallure of his secret service in Cuba. declared the matter to be the lack of women sples.

"What we want," he said, "is some Cuban woman in love with Spanish officers. Is it possible that none of you cabalieros are sufficiently attractive to secure them?"

This was the beginning of Nina Diaz' infamous career as a spy. A traitor through and through, when she and her lover were arrested by the insurgents she gave him up to death, claiming that he had sought to bribe her to betray her friends, and so saved her own life at the expense of his. When the Cubans discovered her treachery, upon another occasion, she escaped to Havana and thence to New York. The Cubans were forewarned of her coming, and she found her hands tied. They refused absolutely to trust her. So she went home, baffied and angry, and now, it is said, she is back again in disguise, although nobody seems to know exactly what that disguise is.

When she visited New York the last time this country was not at war with Spain, therefore her designs against and treachery to the Cubans were no offense against the laws of the United States. Now, however, under the changed conditions, she is a criminal, and comes at the risk of her life. Still, as the United States does not war upon women, it is more than probable that if caught her punishment will be imprisonment, rather than death.

Cuban Wemen as Spies.

Caban Women as Spies.

To the credit of the Cuban women it should be remembered that to offset these few traitors there are scores of women few traitors there are scores of women serving their own people against the Spaniards. Indeed, correspondents declare that every Cuban woman is, so far as, she is able, a secret service agent for the insurgents. Their success in discovering and their ingenuity in transmitting information is a prime cause of the inhumanity of the Spanish officials toward them all. No fatigue is too severe, no hardship nor danger too great to be undergone in the service of their beloved Cuba.

The great obstacle to the successful employment of women as spies is that, with rare exceptions, women will betray any one else for the sake of a lover. Nay, more—in a transport of jealousy a scores.

more-in a transport of jealousy a woman may betray the man whom she loves to imprisonment and death. If she is in love on the side which she is serving, and her lover keeps her in a good humor, she is invaluable; otherwise, disastrous experiences may occur.

lover keeps her in a good humor, she is invaluable; otherwise, disastrous experiences may occur.

One of the most active and useful agents of the Confederate government during the first half of the war of the rebellion was an Englishwoman of rank—a Lady Eleanor N., the relative of Lady Macdonald, wife of the governor general of Canada. Visiting in Richmond during the winter of 15il she became engaged to a Virginian, who was later on an officer of high rank in the Southern army, and was, of course, ready and anxious to serve him and the cause which he espoused. A subject of the British government, residing in Canada, with friends in Richmond, she went back and forth with the malls for the state department at Richmond. Sometimes she went all the way under a flag of truce. Sometimes the letters were brought to her in Baltimore, and sometimes in New York. It was not until '63 that she was detected, and then chiefly through her prostration by grief at the loss of her lover, who was killed in a skirmish near Richmond. At this news she became careless, lost the nerve and perfect self-possession which had hitherto borne her through all dangers, and when the letters were found in her baggage broke down and confessed everything.

INDIANS AS RUNNERS.

Reliable Instances of Their Bemarkable Powers of Endur-

General Crook is quoted by Edward S. Ellis as having seen an Apache lope for 1,500 feet up the side of a mountain without showing the first signs of fatigue, there showing the first signs of fatigue, there being no perceptible sign of increase of res-piration. Captain H. L. Scott, of the Sev-enth cavalry, has related some astonishing feats performed by the Chiracahua Apaches feats performed by the Chiracahua Apaches forming troop L of his regiment. He tells how nine of these Indians, after a hard day's work, by way of recreation, pursued a coyote for two hours, captured the nimble brute and brought it into camp; how, on another occasion, the scouts gave chase to a deer, ran it down some nine miles from camp and fetched it in alive. Hence I see no good reason for doubting the word of an old-timer I met in the Rocky mountains, who told that, in the days before the Atlantic & Pacific railroad was built, the Pima Indians of Arisona would recover settlers' stray horses, along the overland trail, by walking them down in the course of two or three days. After this one may begin to believe that "Lying Jim" Beckwourth, whose remarkable adventures early in this century are preserved in book form, was a much maligned man, and that he spoke no more than the truth when he said he had known instances of Indian runners accomplishing upward of 110 miles in one day.
